I just installed an MIT personal certificate and a message displayed, "Your personal certificate has been installed, you should keep a backup copy of this certificate." Do I need to back up my certificate?

Q: I just installed an MIT personal certificate and a message displayed, "Your personal certificate has been installed, you should keep a backup copy of this certificate." Do I need to back up my certificate?

Answer

No, it's not necessary to back it up. In the event that you lose your MIT certificate, you can obtain it again at any time by going to Certificates at MIT and clicking on the link, Get MIT Personal Certificate.
