Overview

IS&T is migrating email and calendaring data from the ON PremisExchange Server to Microsoft 365. Microsoft 365 is an enterprise email, calendaring and notes platform based in the cloud. All your data follows you from device to device without any action required on your part. It's also fully integrated with the rest of the Microsoft 365 applications.

What should I expect?

Microsoft 365 provides the same email experience for Outlook users on Windows and Mac computers, while improving the user experience on mobile devices and the Web. It also enables various enhancements, including larger mailboxes. Existing email clients should work with O365. You may need to reconfigure them slightly to list your Account as username@mit.edu instead of just username as you may currently. See:

- Microsoft 365 - Email and Calendaring - How do I check or update my username?

All your contacts, rules and filters should transfer automatically. You should notice little to no difference in your day to day use of email and calendaring. You may find the O365 App has more functionality and is easier to use than your current email client on mobile, but you are not required to switch to it. You can continue to use your current email.

If you have delegates or are a delegate, all of those people must migrate at the same time to maintain those relationships. If you are not all on the same system, you will no longer be able to delegate or serve as a delegate to people on the other system.

Your web email will now be available at Office 365 Outlook Web Access \(Touchstone Authentication\) instead of the previous MIT site.

Review our Migration Checklist to find out what you should do before, during and after you're migrated to O365.
