How can I center text?

To center portions of text, you use the "center" environment. Double backslashes (\\) are used to break up lines within the environment. Here's an example:

```
\begin{center}
  This is a line of centered text.\\
  Here's another one.\\
  LaTeX is really useful.
\end{center}
```

This would produce:

```
This is a line of centered text.
      Here's another one.
      LaTeX is really useful.
```

You can also center inside of other environments, by using the \centering declaration at the beginning of the environment:

```
\begin{quotation}
  \centering
  This is a quotation\\ whose lines\\
  are centered.
\end{quotation}
```
