

How do I add tip, note, info, and warning boxes to articles?

Q: How do I add tip, note, info, and warning boxes to articles?

Answer

Tip, note, warning, and info boxes are specified by wiki markup. Simply put the `{note}`, `{tip}`, `{warning}`, or `{info}` markup tag on each side of the text you want included in the box. In the examples below you can see the wiki markup and the resulting box it creates.

Example tip wiki markup:

{tip} Tip: Save early and often when creating and editing articles. If your browser crashes or you accidentally navigate away from a page you could lose data.
{tip}

Resulting tip:

Tip: Save early and often when creating and editing articles. If your browser crashes or you accidentally navigate away from a page you could lose data.

Example note wiki markup:

{note} Note: The Knowledge Base is a shared resource. Other authors may edit your articles. You can track changes to articles you create by putting a watch on them. For more information about watches, see [handbook:Watching Articles].
{note}

Resulting note:

Note: The Knowledge Base is a shared resource. Other authors may edit your articles. You can track changes to articles you create by putting a watch on them. For more information about watches, see Watching Articles.

Example warning wiki markup:

{warning} Warning/Important: Do not delete Knowledge Base articles. Deleted articles can not be restored. Instead move outdated articles to the Archive space. They won't be accessible by customers viewing the Knowledge Base, but they can be restored or reviewed later if the information is needed for historical reasons or somebody is running an outdated configuration. For more information on moving articles between spaces, see [handbook:How do I move a Knowledge Base article to a different space?]
{warning}

Resulting warning:

Warning/Important: Do not delete Knowledge Base articles. Deleted articles can not be restored. Instead move outdated articles to the Archive space. They won't be accessible by customers viewing the Knowledge Base, but they can be restored or reviewed later if the information is needed for historical reasons or somebody is running an outdated configuration. For more information on moving articles between spaces, see How do I move a Knowledge Base article to a different space?

Example info wiki markup:

{info:title=Title/Header}
These boxes are useful for highlighting key information in articles, but use them sparingly. Too many colored boxes in an article makes it cluttered and hard to read.
{info}

Resulting info:

Title/Header
