How can I center text?

To center portions of text, you use the "center" environment. Double backslashes (\ \ ) are used to break up lines within the environment. Here's an example:

```
\begin{center}
 This is a line of centered text.\\
 Here's another one.\\
 LaTeX is really useful.
 \end{center}
```

This would produce:

```
This is a line of centered text.
       Here's another one.
     LaTeX is really useful.
```

You can also center inside of other environments, by using the \centering declaration at the beginning of the environment:

```
\begin{quotation}
 \centering
 This is a quotation\\ whose lines\\
 are centered.
 \end{quotation}
```
